A SUGGESTED PLAN FOR THE Re-organization of the Pennsylvania National Guard

By Brig. General William G. Price, Jr., Commanding 1st Brigade.

It has been said that we do not remain stationary in any vocation for long, that we either progress or retrogress. It seems to me that this axiom applies to the profession of Arms and to our own service in the National Guard. In my opinion we have "arrived" as a whole, at about as high a state of efficiency as we will be able to attain under present conditions. To be sure, individuals by persistent application and study will attain higher efficiency, but taking the members of the Guard individually and at large, with the average time which is available to them in their various vocations in life for the pursuit and practice of military science, we have, as I have stated, about reached our limitation.

It is clearly evident to the writer that the enactment of a "pay bill," for which the members of the National Guard Associations of the United States have so earnestly worked during the past six years is some years off, and that when the attempt to obtain its approval by Congress is again made the chances of its passage will be better if the organization of the Guard in each of the States should precisely conform with that prescribed in the Field Service Regulations. It will then be much more difficult for the War Department to successfully oppose the passage of a bill providing for the payment of the members of the Organized Militia for service at their home station, for it seems to be the general impression that that branch of the National Government has opposed it. If the Organized Militia is organized in each State with the proper quota of all troops completed, as prescribed in the Field Service Regulations, these forces then would be properly balanced according to accepted theories in modern armies. All that would be lacking by them would be sufficient time in which to prepare for prompt and efficient service. Pay for service at home stations, I believe, will provide the necessary time and attract any personnel that we now lack. With such forces, composed of intelligent, loyal and patriotic citizens, capable of immediate expansion, when properly organized and balanced, trained as it will be possible to train them, with full ranks at all drills and full classes at all schools for officers and men, Congress will then realize that it will be infinitely less expensive to maintain a much larger effective force by these means than to increase the standing army itself.

It is very generally understood that the reason the Regular Army of the United States is not completely organized as prescribed in the Field Service Regulations, for which it is responsible, is, because of the physical conditions existing; that is, Congress cannot be prevailed upon to see the wisdom of conforming therewith. The Secretary of War seems to have no hesitancy in directing the several States to proceed forthwith with the organization of their military forces as prescribed in the Field Service Regulations overlooking, perhaps, that the Legislatures of many of the States meet only every two (2) years, and that they, the legislators, may hold that inasmuch as the Congress of the United States think it unnecessary to fully organize the forces of the United States as per Field Service Regulations, it is hardly incumbent upon the several States to assume the difficult task of maintaining those units of an army which are so hard to organize and support in times of peace and by men busy in the affairs of life.

However, we will assume for the purpose of this article that it is possible in Pennsylvania to maintain organizations of every branch that enter into the composition of an Infantry Division; and that it is the purpose of our State authorities to comply with the conditions of Circular No. 8 recently issued by Division of Military Affairs.

Then what are we facing? First—A total lack of armory facilities to properly care for the new units which would have to be organized with very limited funds available for the construction of such armories and with the next regular session of the Legislature two years off. Second—Thirteen regiments of infantry, perhaps none of which would want to be mustered out or transferred to other branches of the services, therefore, to provide auxiliary troops for them would mean raising enough auxiliary troops to complete one and one-half divisions.

This is certainly out of the question, for obvious reasons, and to the writer the only remedy would seem to be to change some of the existing infantry regiments into the necessary troops which go to complete an Infantry Division. I recognize the difficulties as seemingly insurmountable under existing conditions, but fortunately Pennsylvania has as Chief of Staff of the Commander in Chief perhaps the one man in Pennsylvania, who by reason of his long experience, his peculiar ability as an organizer and complete knowledge of the personnel of the officers of the division, can if given the proper support by the officers of the division, transform the Pennsylvania Division into an Infantry Division in fact, that is, organized as prescribed in the Field Service Regulations and I believe without causing many officers, if any, to retire.

To my mind the present situation calls for an entire re-organization and re-arrangement of our Guard. This would take some time to complete, but the Guard would emerge from the shake-up a completed Infantry Division, a stronger State force, a more valuable adjunct to the army and a force to conjure with, in short a completed well balanced army of a sovereign State.

In order to successfully accomplish such a radical change as would follow a re-organization, it would be necessary for all officers, or at least a large number of them, to suppress their personal feelings and perhaps ambitions, and unselfishly resolve that the Guard, of which they are members, is to be a more efficient mobile force than ever in its history, and this will be possible because of their willingness to sacrifice their personal wishes to the general good of the service if and when necessary.

In giving up the arm of the service in which he has been trained and taking up a new arm an officer but adds to his value as an officer; he will be interested in new problems, his general view broadened and he would find the new conditions interesting.

In this article I will not take up the departmental organizations which are already completed in a comprehensive manner, nor will I do more than suggest the transfer of existing troops to organizations to be created in order to complete the line of an Infantry Division, to be commanded by a Major General, with such staff troops as are practical. The five ammunition wagon companies, the supply train of six wagon companies and pack train are purposely omitted as, in my judgment, it is entirely impractical to maintain these units in the States in the time of peace, and if it is expected that we should have them, let them be purchased by the War Department and stored ready for shipment to troops when they are needed. The Quartermaster Corps can be organized from the present department.

We have at present in our service one Division Headquarters, four Brigade Headquarters, one hundred and fifty infantry companies, contained in thirteen regiments, eight troops of cavalry, two companies of engineers, two field batteries, one signal company and one field hospital company. We require for an Infantry Division:

- 1 Division Headquarters.
- 3 Brigades of Infantry (9 regiments), 3 Brigade Headquarters.
- 1 Regiment of Cavalry (12 troops).
- 1 Brigade of Artillery (2 regiments), 1 Brigade Headquarters.
- 1 Battalion of Engineers (3 companies).

Staff:

Quartermaster Corps.

Signal troops.

1 Battalion (2 companies).

Sanitary Troops:

4 Ambulance Companies.

4 Field Hospital Companies.

(Omitted):

Ammunition train (5 wagon companies).

Supply train (6 wagon companies).

Some such plan as follows might not be impossible of fulfillment and contemplates the organization of a complete Infantry Division.

If we reduce the infantry organization to the number of companies required for nine regiments of infantry, i. e., 108 companies, we apparently have left 42 companies, unless it would be found expedient to add a machine gun company to each of the nine regiments, in which event there would be 33 companies left. Having nine completely organized infantry regiments, as required for a division, it would be necessary to organize ten additional batteries of light artillery and this could best be accomplished by consolidating two companies of infantry into one battery. This would require 20 of the 33 companies of infantry remaining, and would provide places for two regimental headquarters organizations and four battalion headquarters, including bands. This would also provide place for one brigade headquarters organization.

Four troops of cavalry could be organized from four of the thirteen infantry companies remaining, leaving nine infantry companies to be taken care of. One of these could be made into an engineer company, thus completing the engineer battalion of three companies. We would require three additional field hospital companies and four ambulance companies, and if seven of the eight companies remaining are not suitable for this purpose these new units could be organized. If it would not be expedient to organize machine gun companies then let us organize one regiment of coast artillery. Pennsylvania is a coast State and might well furnish this regiment.

We would then have a complete division consisting of:

- Headquarters.
- 9 Regiments of Infantry (3 Brigade Headquarters).
- 2 Regiments Field Artillery (1 Brigade Headquarters). 12 Batteries (10 battalions to be organized from 20 companies of infantry).
- 1 Regiment of Cavalry (1 Regimental Headquarters and 1 Battalion Headquarters transferred from infantry). 12 Troops (4 troops to be organized from 4 companies of infantry).
- 1 Battalion of Engineers (1 Battalion Headquarters to be transferred from infantry). 3 Companies (1 company to be organized from 1 company of infantry).
- 2 Signal Companies (1 company to be organized from 1 company of infantry and 1 Battalion Headquarters from infantry).
- 3 Ambulance Companies (to be created by transfer from infantry).
- 4 Hospital Companies (3 to be created by transfer from infantry).

Now the question presents itself, where will the service be best served in making the necessary changes to accomplish this? I would suggest the following, not that I expect to be agreed with necessarily, but suggest them because of the necessity of changes and for various other reasons both territorial and considering existing conditions. I would here interject that if in regiments selected to remain as infantry organizations there should be units that would better accomplish the end sought if transferred to other arms, because of the particular fitness of officers or men for the new organizations to be created, then companies from the regiments of infantry to be disbanded could replace these companies.

A company in a designated district might for proper reasons desire to change from infantry arm to cavalry or artillery, engineer, signal or sanitary troops, then the vacancy thus caused could be filled by a company of a regiment selected for disbandment or by transfer from another regiment which could in turn be filled as above outlined. I would retain the first, second and third brigades of infantry with the following changes:

In the First Brigade, now in Philadelphia, change one full regiment to an artillery regiment and add to the brigade thus depleted the Fourth Regiment. This takes care of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Regiments of Infantry. In the Second Brigade the organization to remain as at present, i. e., Tenth, Sixteenth, and Eighteenth, unless it was thought best to transfer units of these regiments to other arms, in which case vacancies occurring could be filled by companies of the Fourteenth Regiment. This regiment, the Fourteenth, I would change to the Second Regiment of Field Artillery, adding to it Battery B, now in Pittsburgh, and Battery C, at Phoenixville. By this plan we would have thus reduced our force by two regiments of infantry without loss of either headquarters and but few, if any, officers.

I would reorganize the Third Brigade by adding the Eighth Infantry and taking away the Twelfth, leaving the Eighth, Ninth and Thirteenth as comprising this brigade. This leaves the Sixth and Twelfth Regiments not brigaded and from these two regiments I would form one Coast Artillery Regiment, preferably the Sixth, because of its geographical location. From the Twelfth fill the Thirteenth and Fourth by transfer and also from this regiment organize the cavalry troops, engineer troops, etc., or, as before stated, select these troops from other regiments where peculiar fitness of officers and location of armories now completed might better lend themselves to the plan here suggested, and transfer the present companies of the Twelfth to the nearest regiment to it needing additional companies.

The Regimental Headquarters of the Twelfth could be made the Regimental Headquarters of the cavalry and the Brigade Headquarters of the Fourth Brigade would be taken care of in the new organization of an Artillery Brigade. If it was decided to reorganize the division various plans suggest themselves to the writer as they probably do to any interested reader, but my object now is to suggest at once a reorganization of "Our Army" to a balanced fighting force with the necessary auxiliary troops. The selection of the troops to be changed to other arms is a detail that can be worked out at Harrisburg by the Chief of Staff, in whose judgment we may safely abide, together with the officers most affected or interested in the proposed changes.

The foregoing arrangement is necessarily arbitrary and no doubt many better plans could be suggested and will be, but my reason for writing this article is to invite discussion and from the discussion of this subject in Pennsylvania by members of the National Guard and resultant action therefrom we will, I believe, emerge an Infantry Division still holding the same place in the Organized Militia of the United States that we have heretofore held.

In conclusion I may add that where our State code will not permit the organizing of the auxiliary units needed to complete the division, as for instance the organization of two regiments of Field Artillery, where the code permits but five batteries, it has been suggested to the writer that perhaps the troops selected for the change could be detailed until the next meeting of the Legislature in January, 1915, to act as artillery or such other units of service needed to complete the division, until the code could be changed authorizing these extra organizations.

THE FAMOUS GENERAL ORDER NO. 8.

War Department,
Office of the Chief of Staff, Division of Militia Affairs,
CIRCULAR NO. 8.
Washington, August 1, 1913.

Section 3 of the amended militia law reads in part as follows:

"On and after January 21, 1910, the organization * * * of the Organized Militia in the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia shall be the same as that which is now or may hereafter be prescribed for the Regular Army of the United States, subject in time of peace to such general exceptions as may be authorized by the Secretary of War."

Exercising the discretion thus vested in him as to the general exceptions in peace, and believing that a sufficient time has now elapsed to enable the States to more definitely conform in organization to the Regular Army, the Secretary of War has prescribed the following:

1. In time of peace the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia will be considered as Territorial militia departments, the respective governors and the commanding general of the District of Columbia being, respectively, the commander in chief of each. These departments may have administrative staffs conforming in size and rank of personnel to the custom of the War Department in similar cases in the Federal establishment, as indicated later in this circular. From these staff departments will be detailed the staff officers for tactical units as is done in the Regular Army. In addition to this territorial organization, the Organized Militia of these departments comprises those tactical units whose organization, armament, and discipline conform to that which is prescribed for similar tactical units in the Regular Army, subject to the provisions of Section 3 of the militia law in regard to the inspectors of small-arms practice. When the Organized Militia of any State constitutes a division in accordance with the requirements hereinafter prescribed and there are other units of the Organized Militia attached thereto for instructive and administrative purposes, the staff of the major general commanding may be so constituted as to meet the territorial and tactical requirements within the limits hereinafter prescribed.

2. Officers on the staff of the governor, but who are not authorized members of either the line or one of the staff corps of the Organized Militia, are not considered as part of the Organized Militia in so far as the provisions of the militia law are concerned.

3. The organization of the staff corps and departments of the Organized Militia of a State should be commensurate with the organization of the tactical units of the Organized Militia of the State.

The number and rank of the officers of the administrative staff corps and departments should be sufficient—

(a) To carry on in the State, both in times of peace and war, the proper military administration at guard headquarters.

(b) To provide the militia organizations, both in time of peace and war, with the proper quota of staff officers to suit their legitimate needs.

In accordance with these principles, Table "A" of this circular is formulated as indicating what is an appropriate organization of the staff corps and departments of a State or Territory and to which they shall conform.

For each State one adjutant general with the rank of not more than a brigadier general, all other staff officers to be officers of the Organized Militia of the State and in number and rank to conform with the strength of the Organized Militia of the particular State and not to exceed those shown in Table "A."

4. The organization of a division is prescribed in Field Service Regulations. A division consists of—

- 3 Infantry brigades of 3 regiments each.
- 1 regiment of Cavalry.
- 1 brigade of Field Artillery (2 regiments).
- 1 pioneer battalion of Engineers (3 companies).
- 1 battalion of Signal Corps (2 companies).
- 4 field hospitals.
- 4 ambulance companies.
- 1 ammunition train.
- 1 supply train.
- 1 pack train.

A shortage of one battalion of Field Artillery, two field hospitals, two ambulance companies, one ammunition train, one supply train, and one pack train is authorized until June 30, 1915, without affecting the status of a division, provided the other components above enumerated exist and conform. Except as thus authorized the present so-called divisions in several States will, after January 1, 1914, be regarded as brigades and lesser units and will not be entitled to a major general and his staff and a divisional organization. For administrative purposes brigades and lesser units may be attached to a division.

A division is the command of a major general, and he may have three aids (captains or lieutenants) on his personal staff; such aids must be selected from officers of the line or staff corps of the Organized Militia. The staff of a division is as follows:

1 chief of staff, colonel.*

1 assistant chief of staff, major or captain.*

*When the Organized Militia is called into service of the United States, the chief of staff and assistant chief of staff will be assigned by the President of the United States. (At all other times an officer of the line or other staff corps with suitable rank should be detailed as acting chief of staff and acting assistant chief of staff).

1 division adjutant, major.

1 division inspector, major.

1 division judge advocate, major.

1 division quartermaster, lieutenant colonel.

1 division surgeon, lieutenant colonel.

LIEUTENANT (JUNIOR GRADE) LOUIS E. FAGAN, JR.,
Commanding Division "A," First Battalion, Naval Force of Pennsylvania, stationed at Philadelphia, Pa., who will shortly be commissioned in the U. S. Marine Corps.

The staff of a division may also include one inspector of small arms practice, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

When necessary, the commanders of the battalion of engineers and signal troops may be directed, in addition to their other duties, to act respectively as chief engineer and chief signal officer. When a division acts independently a chief engineer (lieutenant colonel) is detailed on the staff of the division commander. In the field a sanitary inspector (major) may be assigned to the division.

5. An Infantry brigade consists of three regiments, a Cavalry brigade of two or three regiments, and a Field Artillery brigade of two regiments. For administrative and tactical purposes, additional regiments and lesser units may be attached to a brigade.

A brigade is the command of a brigadier general, and he may have two aids (lieutenants), who must be selected from officers of the line or staff corps, on his personal staff.

The staff of a brigade, forming part of a division, consists of one brigade adjutant, major. It may also include one inspector of small arms practice with the rank of major.

Where a brigade exists independently of a division, the brigade may, when engaged in field or camp service for instruction, or other service, have attached to it for administration and supply, such additional staff officers as may be necessary, not to exceed the number and rank authorized for a division, and all such officers to be selected from the staff officers authorized in paragraph 3 hereof, or detailed from the line of the troops in camp.

6. The organization of divisions and brigades within a State is optional with the State, but if organized they must conform to the provisions of this circular.

7. The organization of regiments and lesser units will be as follows:

Infantry.—One company to be organized as 1 separate company; 2 companies to be organized as 2 separate companies; 3 companies to be organized as 3 separate companies; 4 companies to be organized as 1 separate battalion; 5 companies to be organized as 1 separate battalion and 1 separate company; 6 companies to be organized as 1 separate battalion and 2 separate companies; 7 companies to be organized as 1 separate battalion and 3 separate companies; 8 companies to be organized as 2 separate battalions; 9 companies to be organized as 2 separate battalions and 1 separate company; 10 companies to be organized as 2 separate battalions and 2 separate companies; 11 companies to be organized as 2 separate battalions and 3 separate companies; 12 companies to be organized as 1 regiment of 3 battalions.

Separate companies may, for administrative and tactical purposes, be attached to battalions. Thus, if 5, 6, or 7 companies exist, the extra companies may be attached to the battalion; if 9 companies exist the extra company may be attached to either battalion; if 10 or 11 companies exist, the extra companies may be attached to either of the two complete battalions or part to one and part to the other battalion.

If, at any time, the number of companies in a complete regiment falls below 12, exclusive of the machine gun company, the deficiency must be replaced within six months or the regimental organization be considered as permanently abandoned, the officers and enlisted men of the regimental headquarters, the headquarters detachment, the mounted scouts and orderlies, the machine gun company, the band, and one battalion headquarters being mustered out or otherwise disposed of.

Machine gun companies, mounted scouts, and headquarters detachments are not specifically authorized by law for the Regular Army, but under the provisions of Section 3 of the militia law, the Secretary of War has already authorized a number in the Organized Militia and will consider applications for authority to organize additional ones for each complete regiment of infantry or cavalry. Details of the organizations of such units are prescribed in General Orders, War Department, and in Bulletins of Militia Notes, Division of Militia Affairs.

Companies in excess of 12 (except machine gun companies), will be organized in the same manner into additional separate companies, separate battalions, or regiments.

Cavalry.—The same as infantry, including machine gun troops, and headquarters detachment, and the conditions relative to replacing missing troops within six months. A veterinarian is authorized for each independent squadron and two for a regiment.

Inspectors of small arms practice are authorized as follows: For each regiment of infantry or cavalry (12 companies, or troops, exclusive of machine gun organizations), an assistant inspector with the rank of captain, and for each separate or unassigned battalion of infantry or engineers, or squadron of cavalry (4 companies or troops), an assistant inspector with the rank of first lieutenant. These officers should be additional officers in their respective organizations, and detailed as inspectors of small arms practice in the same manner as other regimental or battalion staff officers.

Field Artillery.—One battery to be organized as 1 separate battery; 2 batteries to be organized as 2 separate batteries; 3 batteries to be organized as 1 battalion; 4 batteries to be organized as 1 battalion and 1 separate battery; 5 batteries to be organized as 1 battalion and 2 separate batteries; 6 batteries to be organized as 1 regiment of 2 battalions. Batteries in excess of 6 will be organized in the same manner into additional separate batteries, separate battalions, or regiments. Details of the organization of battalion and regimental headquarters are contained in the Field Artillery Drill Regulations. The same principle relative to attaching companies to battalions in the infantry, and the same conditions relative to replacing missing companies within six months, apply to the Field Artillery also. Veterinarians are authorized at the rate of one for each battalion.

Engineers.—Engineer troops may be organized into a corps. These troops, commissioned officers and enlisted men, will be organized into companies and battalions, either as herein prescribed for Infantry, or the following organization prescribed by the Field Service Regulations, 1910, for engineer troops, may be followed.

One company, pioneers, to be organized as 1 separate company; 2 companies, pioneers, to be organized as 2 separate companies; 3 companies, pioneers, to be organized as 1 separate battalion; 4 companies, pioneers, to be organized as 1 battalion, or as 1 battalion and 1 separate company (which may be attached to the battalion); 5 companies, pioneers, to be organized as 1 battalion and 2 separate companies (which may be attached to the battalion); 6 companies, pioneers, to be organized as 2 separate battalions. Three or more separate battalions may be organized in time of peace as a regiment, 1 battalion of which may be organized as a pontoon battalion.

Bands—Organized as prescribed by law for the same arm of the Regular Army, are authorized for complete regiments of Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, and regiments of Engineers. Under Section 3 of the militia law the Secretary of War will consider applications for authority to organize bands for separate battalions.

Signal Troops—One field company to be organized as 1 separate company; 2 field companies to be organized as a battalion, or as 2 separate companies. More than 2 companies will be organized as separate battalions or separate companies. Signal companies will be organized as prescribed in Circular No. 1, War Department, Division of Militia Affairs, January 21, 1913.

Coast Artillery—(a) The Coast Artillery troops of the Organized Militia of each of the States, the Territory of Hawaii, and the District of Columbia, shall be organized into a Coast Artillery Corps, which shall consist of the companies of Coast Artillery of the Organized Militia in each of the States, the Territory of Hawaii, or in the District of Columbia, and the number of colonels, lieutenant colonels, majors, captains, first lieutenants, second lieutenants, chaplains, sergeants, major, senior grade, master electricians, engineers, electrician sergeants first class, electrician sergeants second class, master gunners and firemen, hereinafter provided for.

The officers and non-commissioned staff officers in each Coast Artillery Corps of the Organized Militia shall not in number and rank exceed those shown in Table "C."

(b) The officers, non-commissioned staff officers, and companies comprising each Coast Artillery Corps of the Organized Militia may be organized into two or more Coast Defence Commands, and the officers, non-commissioned officers, and companies constituting the Coast Artillery Corps may be assigned to these Coast Defence Commands at the discretion of the governors of the States, the Territory of Hawaii, or the commanding general, District of Columbia Militia.

The assignment of Coast Artillery troops of the Organized Militia to coast defenses and to batteries thereat will be made by the War Department.

(c) In time of peace 1 band is authorized for each coast defense command consisting of 4 or more companies of Coast Artillery. In time of war bands will be accepted in the service of the United States at the rate of 1 band for each 12 companies of Coast Artillery.

(d) Any changes in the organization of Coast Artillery Corps of the Organized Militia which may be necessary under the provisions of this circular must be made not later than June 30, 1915.

MEDICINE'S CONTRIBUTION TO MILITARY EFFICIENCY.

Henry H. Doan, Major, Medical Corps, N. G. P.

Ten months and not a single case of typhoid fever among the soldiers in the standing Army of the United States! Compare this with the year 1906, with an admission rate of 5.66 per 1,000.

The typhoid fever prophylactic is far beyond the stage of experimentation. This good work was put into practical use in the English Army during the Boer campaign of 1894-95; nineteen years ago; and to-day those familiar with its administration are as certain of what it will accomplish, and, when standardized material is used and proper technic observed, can as unreservedly assure the patients that no harm will result as though the physician was giving some such old and time-honored remedy as syrup of squills.

In all the history of human endeavor nothing compels greater admiration than devotion to the conquest of a worldwide disease. In this monumental achievement the ultimate success is due to the researches and experiments of a number of gentlemen: Frankel, Simmonds, Baumer, Piper, Pasteur, Wright, Widal and Russell, all of whom were actuated by an ambition to relieve human beings of unnecessary suffering. Thus subjugation of typhoid fever may well be considered one of the most brilliant accomplishments in the annals of medical progress, and it has come about within the memory of mere youths.

Curiously enough, all our knowledge of the subject has been gained through observation upon soldiers—by attempting to keep fighting men alive until they could be killed by the legitimate methods of civilized warfare. Now, a soldier is efficient only so long as he is healthy. When he becomes ill, he decreases the fighting force, not only through his own incapacity, but because he requires the services of others, to care for him. Of course the business of a soldier is to fight and be killed, possibly; but it isn't his business to be killed before he has a chance to fight. And typhoid fever has killed more soldiers than all the war machinery combined.

When complete confidence was established in this prophylactic, the Secretary of War of the United States, upon the recommendation of the Surgeon General ordered, on September 30th, 1911, the compulsory vaccination of every person in the army under forty-five years of age, and of all recruits. This was carried out as promptly as possible, and, as the result, the United States has to-day an "immunized" army, not a single case of typhoid having thus far been reported among the troops in this country during 1913. This record compared with that of any year previous to the beginning of this vaccination, seems to be little short of miraculous.

Regarding the act of vaccination itself, it is quite simple, consisting merely in the subcutaneous administration, with a hypodermic syringe, of a small quantity of the opalescent prophylactic fluid. The syringe is sterilized by boiling, the skin is prepared by painting with iodine a place on the arm the size of a quarter, and the immunization is completed by the administration of three doses—the first containing seven and one-half drops and the second and third, which are given ten and twenty days later, fifteen drops each. The site of inoculation becomes somewhat red and tender for a day or two, but there is no sore and no scar as in vaccination against smallpox.

In a small percentage of cases, less than five, there is some headache and prostration, but it soon disappears, rarely lasting more than twenty-four or at the most forty-eight hours. In this connection it is necessary to remember that we vaccinate none but the healthy. The immunity lasts about twenty years and six months.

The latest to avail themselves of the preventive are the nurses and orderlies in our large hospitals, who are constantly exposed to the contagion of typhoid. Inoculations have demonstrated that the morbidity among the unvaccinated is nine times greater than among the vaccinated. And no untoward effects have arisen from over one hundred thousand injections in the United States Army and Navy.

Colonel Stillwell, of the Thirteenth Infantry, who is always alive to the advancement of his regiment, has just adopted the novel plan of "open house" to the public to stimulate recruiting. Captain Gregory, of Company D, supervised the several features during the nightly entertainments in connection with the recent "Boosters' Week" for the regiment. The committee in charge sent out several thousand invitations for the first entertainments, which were known as "Open House and Dance." At the conclusion of this affair a sub-committee, stationed at the door, distributed to each of the guests an invitation to be present on the following night, when there was an athletic meet and dance. The guests of the second evening were likewise presented with invitations to attend a regimental evening parade and dance on the following Friday night. On the invitation appeared the following:

"The Thirteenth Regiment means Scranton in the minds of more than 50,000 people who are interested in military affairs in the State of Pennsylvania.

"The Thirteenth has the finest and largest armory in the State of Pennsylvania.

"It is the most progressive regiment in the State, having developed many innovations that have been adopted by the entire National Guard.

"The best equipped for field services.

"First Regiment to Develop Marksmanship.

"Famous for the Goodfellowship of its Officers.

"Boost the Regiment that has made Scranton Famous. Boost the Thirteenth."

During the entertainments, each lady was presented with a box of choice bon-bons. The gentlemen, during the intermission, were invited into the quarters for a smoke and in this manner the officers and non-commissioned officers made the acquaintance of prospective recruits. The expenses incurred were taken from the proceeds of the now celebrated Hallowe'en Masquerade Carnival, from which, it is stated, over $1,000 was realized. A special feature of the week was the installation of an indoor rifle range which will contain twenty targets, which will be constantly exposed to view as an open invitation to practice at any time.

Captain Gregory reports that forty recruits of the highest type were received during these evenings. The new men have been distributed proportionately among the eight Scranton companies. The Thirteenth will soon have its complete organization of twelve companies. A new company of infantry was only recently mustered in at Stroudsburg with over sixty men. This is commanded by Captain Dunning, a gentleman of experience and a former member of the Guard. It is generally believed that this company will replace the Easton company which will probably be transferred to Colonel O'Neill's Fourth Infantry.

The town of Moscow has also been quite active recently towards organizing a company under the supervision of Captain Kingsbury, and forty-five men have already been examined for muster into the service. They will probably be assigned as Company M of the Thirteenth. Carbondale, not to be outdone by its sister towns, has taken on a progressive move and is preparing to organize an infantry unit under the supervision of Mayor James B. Murrin, who is a prominent attorney, and at the present time active in the Thirteenth Regiment. The Thirteenth Infantry will shortly purchase at their own expense, a complement of army wagons and other equipment for field service, so that the entire regiment will be ready for immediate action at short notice.

The usual Hallowe'en masquerade carnival given by the Thirteenth Regiment at Scranton attracted several thousand visitors to the large armory. This event has come to be regarded very much on the order of the Mummers' or New Year Shooters' celebration in Philadelphia on New Year's Day. It is reported that Colonel Stillwell and the board of officers are greatly pleased with the financial results. The proceeds of these affairs are set aside for the Regimental Fund, which is divided proportionately among the eight companies, band and officers' association.

BULLETIN OF MILITIA NOTES.

The question of the use of penalty envelopes by officers of the United States Army detailed under the provisions of the Act of March 3, 1911, for duty as Inspector-Instructors of the Organized Militia, in conducting correspondence pertaining to the work for which detailed having been submitted to the Postmaster General, the following is his decision in the matter:

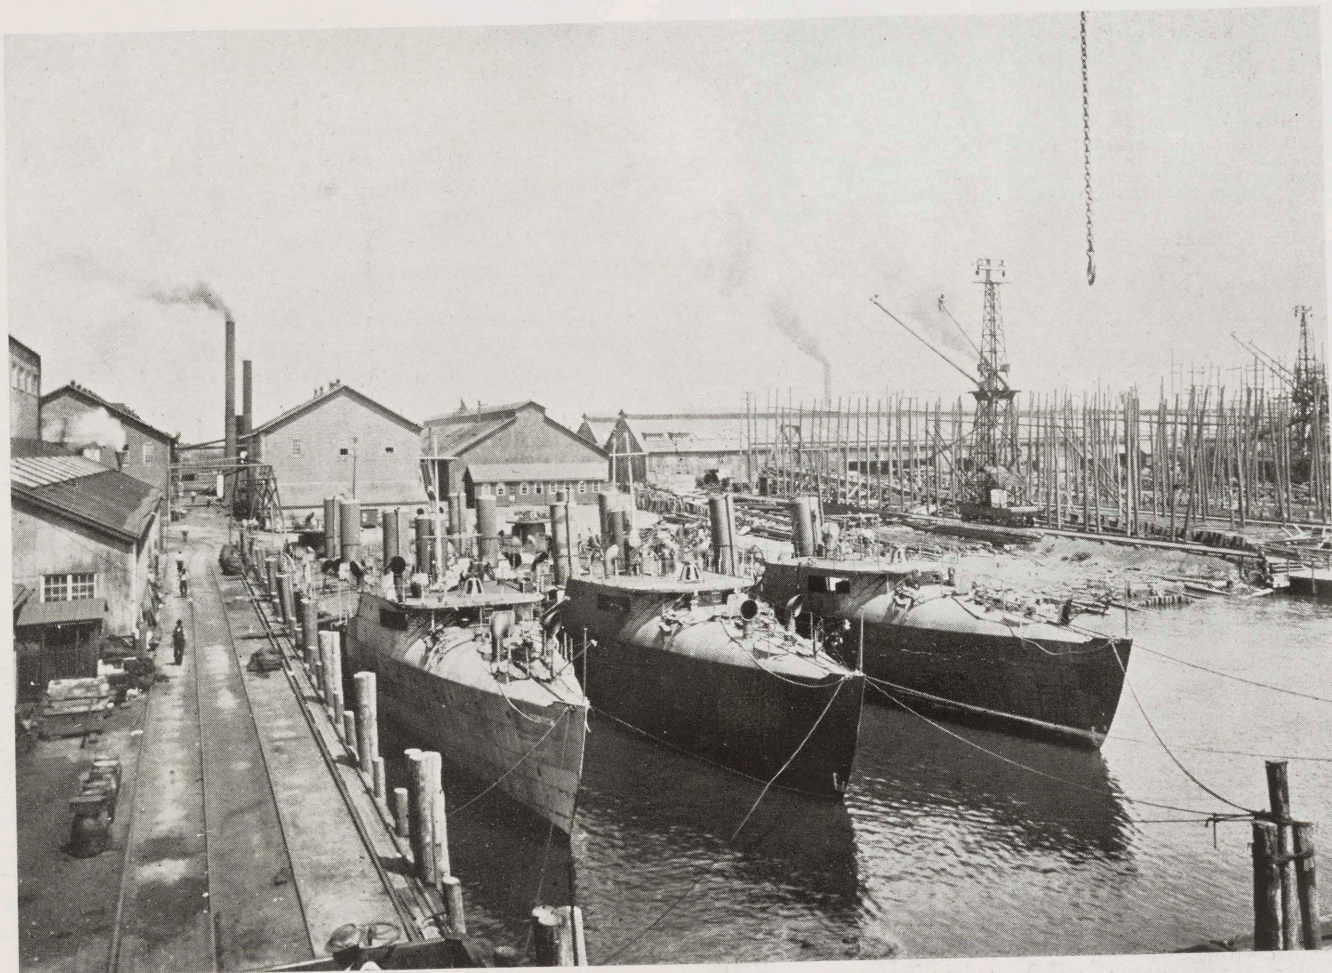

" * * * Such correspondence relates to the official duties of the officer, and under the law, embodied in Section 496, Postal Laws and Regulations, edition of 1913, may be sent by him in the mails, free of postage, under cover of a penalty envelope.

"Members of the Organized Militia of a State or Territory, not being officers of the Government of the United States, are not entitled to use penalty envelopes to send matter in the mails, free of postage except when such envelopes have been furnished them by an officer of the Government, under the provisions of Section 3 of the Act of July 5, 1884, reading as follows:

"Any department or officer authorized to use the penalty envelopes may inclose them with return address to any person or per-

The U. S. S. Worden, a torpedo boat destroyer, is being used weekly by the Philadelphia detachments of the Naval Force. Trips are taken from League Island Navy Yard, beginning either late Saturday night or early Sunday morning. A two or three hour run is made down the Delaware and the vessel is then anchored. Boat drill follows, after which an hour or two of shore liberty is given to those not on watch. Port is reached Sunday evening. These cruises are voluntary and the enlisted men are subject to no expense whatever for rations. A great deal is accomplished in this way, and it has proven a valuable system of training for the Naval Militia.

Company G, Third Infantry, which is commanded by Captain Harry Edwards, is forging ahead as one of the leading infantry units in the State. Since Captain Edwards took command of this company many improvements have been made. Among the most recent change has been a complete refurnishing of the company quarters, which will now compare favorably with the finest in the State and provide the men with the accommodations so necessary to keep up a standard company; the members of the company have also arranged for the entertainment of their many friends at a reception and dance to be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall, West Philadelphia, which affair promises to be one of the leading social features of the season.

The Worden was assigned last spring for the use of the Philadelphia Divisions of the Naval Force of Pennsylvania, and has been in constant use for week-end practice cruises. If the correspondence to be sent by a member of the Organized Militia of a State or Territory to an officer of the army detailed by you as an Inspector-Instructor, under the provisions of the Act of March 3, 1911, constitutes official information requested by such officer, it would appear proper for the officer to furnish such member penalty envelopes for use in mailing it.

NOTES.

The recent wedding of Miss Marion Posten Dougherty, daughter of Major General and Mrs. Charles Bowman Dougherty, and James May Rutter, was a social event in Wilkes-Barre. The ceremony took place at St. Stephen's Church in the presence of a great throng of friends and relatives. National Guard officers in large numbers were among those in attendance. Among the gifts was a silver service presented by the staffs of the Commander-in-Chief and the Division.

It is stated that the work in connection with the State Armory Board has grown to such proportions that it is seriously interfering with the routine of the Adjutant General's Department. It is expected as a result of the development of the armory system that at the next session of the Legislature a bill will be presented for the establishment of a new department for the supervision of the State armories.

The dedication of the Wilkes-Barre Monument, which had been originally planned for Thanksgiving Day, will take place on the anniversary of the Battle of Wyoming on July 3 next. In a near number, General C. Bow Dougherty will present to our readers a historic sketch of Fort Wilkes-Barre, upon the site of which the Marker will be placed. McCormick & French, architects, of Wilkes-Barre, designed the memorial, which is reported to be an artistic triumph. The monument has been cut from Lopez stone and will be a credit to the city.

EDITORIAL.

The death of Quartermaster Hugh Craig, Jr., First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, retired, has removed one of God's noblemen from the activities of this life. For years Quartermaster Craig was associated with the National Guard, and its interests were always dear to his heart. Modest to the extreme, unselfish to a fault, and unaffected in his democracy, he was in every respect the ideal American gentleman and soldier. Quartermaster Craig represented in his own personality all the splendid traditions of the First City Troop. His career was interlocked with the history of that famous organization for many years and his chief thought and pleasure was centred in the old Troop. To his comrades, he was affectionately known as "Field Marshal." Quartermaster Craig was a native of Philadelphia and particularly proud of the distinct American characteristics of the city. He was unusually well versed in the history of the community and fondly cherished the fact that he had lived in both the old and the modern Philadelphia. He was tender in his personal relations with all persons and most generous in his thoughts. His death caused great sorrow throughout the Guard, where he was known and respected as a real friend. The funeral of Quartermaster Craig was typical of the man in its dignified simplicity. The First Troop attended in a body and for the second time in its history the troopers formed an arch of steel through which the body of the deceased was carried. The only other occasion upon which a similar ceremonial honor was paid was at the funeral of Major General George G. Meade. Distinguished officers of the National Guard and enlisted men mingled together in a common bond of sorrow and rendered a mute presentation of respect and grief.

It is understood that a proposition will be advanced at the annual meeting of the National Guard Association to limit the term of the president to one year. This plan has been under discussion for some time, its advocates explaining that its adoption would permit a more generous distribution of the honors of the association and consequently result in an increased interest in its work.

NOTES

Captain R. Otto Woolmuth, Quartermaster, Fourth Infantry, has severed his connection with the National Guard of Pennsylvania, owing to his removal to Idaho. Captain Woolmuth was a veteran officer of the Guard. He served originally in the Bethlehem Rifles, subsequently in the Infantry Battalion, State Fencibles, and for many years as a commissioned officer in the Fourth Infantry. He was an officer of ability and thoroughly versed in matters pertaining to his department. Captain Clarence J. Smith, who has been appointed to succeed Captain Woolmuth, is also an officer of experience and will prove a valuable acquisition in the Quartermaster's Department. Captain Smith is a new school officer and for several years was associated with Company I, Thirteenth Infantry, located at Easton. Upon his removal to Allentown, Colonel O'Neill appointed him Second Lieutenant and Battalion Quartermaster and Commissary. Captain Smith is editor of the Allentown Morning Call, one of the leading papers of northeastern Pennsylvania.

Great interest is being taken throughout the State in the convention of the Pennsylvania National Guard Association to be held at Philadelphia next month. The attendance promises to be the largest in recent years and it is expected that a number of papers of particular importance to the Organized Militia will be read and discussed. The convention will again be held at the Hotel Walton, which for several years has been an ideal hostelry for these meetings. The Walton is splendidly located in the very heart of the shopping and theatrical centre of the city and is one of the famous hotels of the country. The delegates were more than pleased with the hospitality of the Walton in the past, and the selection of the big inn for this year's convention has met with general approval throughout the Guard.

Those members of the Naval Force, Pennsylvania, who went on the foreign battleship cruise to the Mediterranean are not regretting having embarked. Seeing sights of interest, having audiences with His Holiness the Pope and other sovereigns, and enjoying entertainments in honor of the fleet are all incidents worth while experiencing. There ought to be a great deal of talk about upon their return and lots of thrilling adventures to record.

Divisions C and D, Naval Force, Pennsylvania, stationed at Erie, Pa., are busy with winter work on the U. S. S. Wolverine, their practice vessel. The cruising this summer was very successful, and lots of valuable work was accomplished. The usual annual target practice with secondary battery guns was held on the lakes, and the results were gratifying.

The latest bulletin of the Division of Militia Affairs, War Department, contains the following information of interest to the Guard:

The question having been raised as to the right of a State to use funds accruing from the disposition of crops which are grown on rifle ranges procured for the use of the Organized Militia and paid for from the allotment for the "Promotion of Rifle Ranges," from the appropriation under Section 1661, Revised Statutes, the Judge Advocate General, under date of October 29, 1913, states that, in a report of that office of June 2, 1913 (W. D. Bul. No. 22, 1913, p. 7), it was held that while these ranges are under the immediate control of the State military authorities they remain the property of the United States, and if not needed for the State militia, they might be leased by the Secretary of War, but that the proceeds of such leasing belonged to the United States and should be deposited into the treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts, and that, following the rule of decision it necessarily results that crops grown upon such property belong to the United States and that the proceeds from their sale should be covered into the United States Treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. A further extension of this decision would require that funds realized in any way from ground procured for the use of Lieutenant (Junior Grade) Louis Estell Fagan, Jr., has recently been commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the U. S. Marine Corps, having passed the entrance examinations number five on the list of eighty candidates. Twenty-one passed and all will be ordered to Norfolk, Va., for military instruction, to extend over a period of about two years. Mr. Fagan has been commanding officer of Division A, First Battalion, Naval Force, Pennsylvania, for the past three years. He was commissioned Ensign, May, 1910, and Lieutenant (Junior Grade), June, 1911. Mr. Fagan is the son of the late Captain Louis Estell Fagan, U. S. M. C., and a nephew of the late First Lieutenant Colonel Maurice Edward Fagan, U. S. V., and the later Commander Charles Ellwood Colahan, U. S. N. He was educated at the Germantown Academy, U. S. Naval Academy, and Yale University. He has been engaged in business in Philadelphia in mechanical and civil engineering. Lieutenant Fagan gives the National Guard of Pennsylvania the credit for his promotion.

It is to be expected that Lieutenant General Sir Alfred E. Codrington, K. C. V. O., C. B., and the other distinguished English Army officers will long remember the hospitalities shown them by National Guard officers of Pittsburgh and vicinity during their participation in the unveiling of the monument to General Edward Braddock, near Uniontown, last month. The visitors were recipients of numerous courtesies, and as a farewell were given a banquet at the Hotel Schenley on the evening of October 17.

The dinner was a military one, and both hosts and guests were in full dress or special full dress uniforms. Brigadier General A. J. Logan, commanding the Second Brigade, N. G. P., was toastmaster and had on his right General Codrington and on his left Mayor Magee. Toasts to the ing and to the President of the United States were drunk by all present.

One of the incidents of the evening was the appearance in the banquet hall of the Carlisle Indians' foot ball team, on invitation, and they were introduced by General Logan to the English visitors as "real American boys."

Mayor Magee was the first speaker of the evening and welcomed the guests to Pittsburgh, advocated a still closer friendship and, if necessary, an open alliance between the two nations as necessary for the peaceful policing of the world.

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas N. Crago responded to the toast, "The National Guardsman," and Lieutenant Colonel E. L. Kearns to "One Hundred Years of Peace." He spoke of the century that has elapsed since the mother country and the then infant republic had their last differences, and intimated that another hundred years of peace was in sight, with closer bonds of sympathy between the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon people, and, in closing, said that in all probability all future troubles would find the two nations standing shoulder to shoulder, and "God help the outfit that bumps into the two."

General Codrington responded to the toast, "The English Army," and expressed the gratification he and his fellow guests had at the splendid reception they received here, and breathed the spirit of amity between the two peoples. Viscount Campden, of the British embassy, spoke for the British Ambassador, Captain Constable for the Essex regiment and Consul General Wilfred Powell, of Philadelphia, corrected some few errors in history in a splendid speech.

Other speakers were County Commissioner J. Denny O'Neill, Councilman Robert Garland, President of the Chamber of Commerce W. H. Stevenson and Major C. B. Mehard, Adjutant General, Second Brigade, N. G. P.

The English officers left for Washington and will sail for home within a few days.

SOUTH SIDE BANK IN NEW HOME.

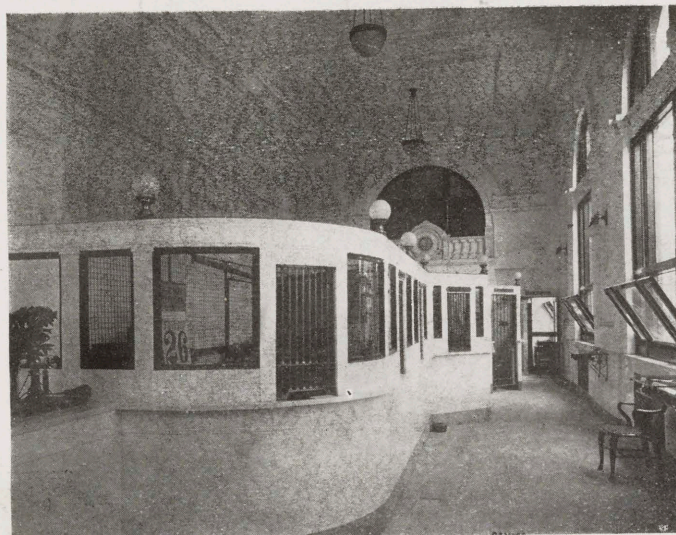

The new home of the South Side Bank, at Wilkes-Barre, is one of the show spots of that flourishing city.

The building—three stories—is of brick and white marble, with apartments on the two upper floors. The interior finish is largely white marble and mahogany and is finely appointed throughout, the planning and arrangements being ideal. In the front of the building, facing South Main street, is located the private office, which is divided from the rest of the banking house by a mahogany partition. The cashier's office is just opposite the doorways behind a marble and bronze railing. The banking screen, including the bookkeeping department, is finished in bronze with white marble base. The vault is equipped with ample safety boxes, currency chests and document files. There are also telephone booths, compounding booths and a ladies' waiting and writing room—a model of convenience.

INTERIOR VIEW.

The officers of the South Side Bank are as follows: President, George T. Dickover; vice president, Henry Schappert; cashier, Roger S. Williams. The directors are Frank Baab, George T. Dickover, Joseph F. Evans, George R. Goebel, H. L. Moore, C. M. Reiley, Joseph C. Schuler, A. Wideman, W. D. White.

NEW OFFICE BUILDING OF THE VULCAN IRON WORKS.

The ornate new office structure of the Vulcan Iron Works at Wilkes-Barre is a model building, and the product of a study in modern comfort conditions and business facilities.

The building is 68x83 feet, four stories high, and is constructed of concrete, stone, brick and terra cotta, with a tiled roof of reinforced concrete. All floors and office partitions are of concrete on

The first and second floors are used for offices of the different departments and for the officials of the company, while the entire third floor is used for draughting room. A special feature of the interior is the cast iron stairs from the basement to the third floor, which was built and erected by the owners and is a particularly fine piece of iron work.

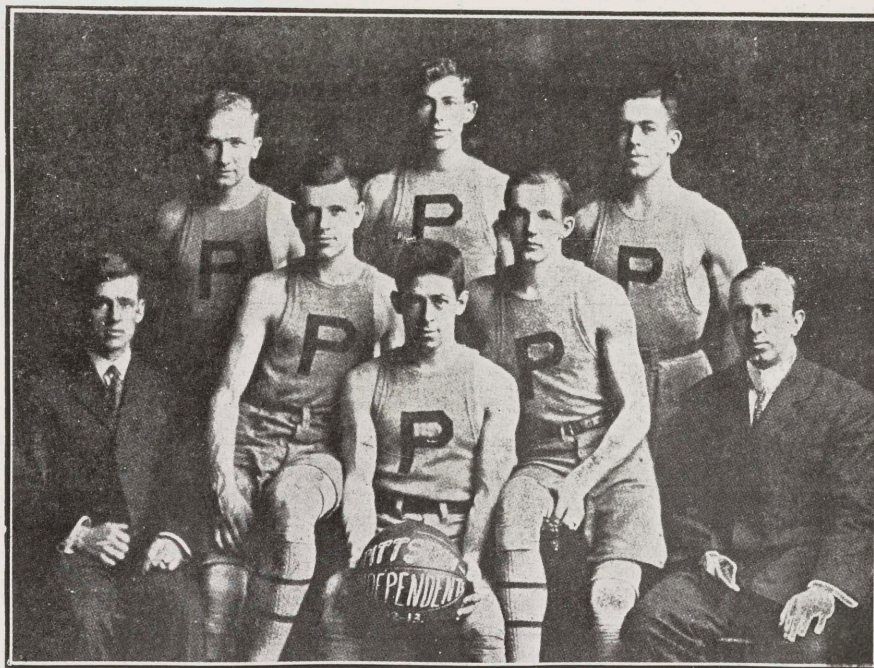

The heating system is singularly different from any in that part of the State. It affords the opportunity for placing the desks against steel reinforcement. A spacious hall through the centre leads to the elevator and stairs and from which all offices may be reached. The vaults for each floor are located immediately in the rear of the elevator and stairs and are 19x20 feet in size, with doors on each side for the use of the offices. Back of the vaults, in a rear wing, are located the toilets, accessible from the offices on both sides of the hall. The entire basement being exceptionally well lighted is used for offices, except a small space in the rear which is occupied by the heating system, vacuum cleaning plant, etc. The attic space is to be used for storage and is admirably suited for the purpose, being well ventilated and lighted from above with a large skylight.

the windows without suffering the annoyance from drafts. Each and every window has a separate heat outlet and all under separate control. All offices are thoroughly ventilated. The fresh air is taken down from the outside above the roof and washed and heated, and is forced through the building to the different outlets by a fan driven by an electric motor. The building is well located on high ground overlooking the entire plant and is beautifully surrounded by shrubbery and trees.
